

REPORTS OF BEST PRACTICES 2020-21

BEST PRACTICES No. 1

Report on Voluntary and Passionate Involvement of College Fraternity in Community Services

1. Title of the Practice:

"Voluntary and Passionate Involvement of College Fraternity in Community Services"

2. Objectives of the Practice:

The objective of voluntary and passionate involvement of college fraternity in community services is to motivate, inspire, and inculcate human values, teamwork, and awareness about various government schemes and policies among students.

3. The Context:

The institution faces financial challenges in funding learning experiences due to limited funds. However, opportunities arise through open proposals and funding from government-aided agencies. These opportunities provide a platform for students to gain practical knowledge about government initiatives and aid in their smooth implementation.

4. The Practice:

The college actively engages with its community through various initiatives such as blood donations, sex education, health awareness programs, digital banking awareness, gender sensitization, and tourism promotion. Additionally, the college collaborates with the Government of India and the Government of A.P to implement various flagship programs. Furthermore, the college provides support to villages affected by natural disasters and pandemics, fostering a sense of responsibility and commitment among students. The institution emphasizes ethics and values by involving students in extracurricular and extension activities.

Principal
D.P.E. College Kamki

5. Evidence of Success:

Over 100 students participated in an Adventure Tourism Promotional Festival, engaging in activities such as mass cleanliness drives and mega dances. The institution received praise from the public, government, and general administration. Certificates were awarded to students for their volunteer services.

Lady faculties extending Voluntary service to Local Farmers (widow Lady) during Rice Harvesting

6. Problems Encountered and Resources Required:

Challenges include transportation and financial constraints for providing food to students during such events. Additionally, the condition of village roads poses difficulties for program implementation. Resources such as improved transportation facilities and adequate funding for meals are required to address these challenges effectively.

Conclusion:

The voluntary and passionate involvement of college fraternity in community services has proven to be a successful endeavor, fostering values of empathy, responsibility, and civic engagement among students. Despite challenges, the dedication of students and support from various stakeholders have contributed to the positive impact of these initiatives on both the college community and society at large. Continued support and resources will further enhance the effectiveness and reach of these endeavors.

Principal
D.P.G. College Kamki

BEST PRACTICES No. 2

Report on Presentation & Promotion of Languages and Mother Tongue (Local Dialects)

Title of the Practice:

Presentation & Promotion of Languages and Mother Tongue (Local Dialects)

Objectives of the Practice:

The objective of preservation and promotion of languages and mother tongue (local dialects) is to raise awareness among students about the rich cultural heritage of their community, emphasizing the importance of preserving it through oral and written forms of language. This practice aims to address the urgent need for cultural preservation in the face of modernity.

The Context:

The college serves as a melting pot of cultural diversity, with students hailing from various districts and cultural backgrounds. Recognizing this diversity, the college places significant importance on preserving cultural heritage for future generations. This initiative fosters understanding, respect for different cultures, and promotes a sense of national integrity among students.

The Practice:

The college actively engages in the preservation and promotion of language and mother tongue/local dialects through various media and co-curricular and extra-curricular activities. Calendar programs such as workshops, departmental seminars, Hindi Diwas, World Poetry Day celebrations, drama performances, and tri-language creative writing/presentation competitions are organized to instill a sense of responsibility towards preserving cultural identity. Additionally, rural field visits are conducted for students to interact with folklorists and priests, gaining insight into the primary sources of culture through personal interviews and discussions. Museum visits and heritage walks are organized to foster respect and appreciation for cultural heritage.

Principal
D.P.C. College Kamki

Evidence of Success:

Students have the opportunity to gain practical knowledge of folk literature, traditional rituals, and customs through these initiatives. The enthusiasm of students for culture has left rural residents deeply satisfied, as it demonstrates the younger generation's keen interest in learning about the cultural heritage of tribal society. Furthermore, the district's lone museum, which was dormant for years, experienced a revival following organized visits coordinated by the institution.

Faculties and Students Participating in Local welcoming dance to understand and document the Age old chanting by the local priest

Students Volunteering for communal services and understanding the culture

Problems Encountered and Resources Required:

Challenges encountered include the limited availability of texts and books written in mother tongue, hindering the effectiveness of the practice. Additionally, securing language experts for various languages/dialects posed initial difficulties. Addressing these challenges requires increased resources for the procurement of relevant materials and the engagement of language experts to support the ongoing preservation and promotion efforts.

Principal
D.P.G. College Kamki

Conclusion:

The practice of presentation and promotion of languages and mother tongue (local dialects) has proven to be instrumental in preserving cultural heritage and fostering a sense of pride and responsibility among students. Despite challenges, the initiative has garnered success in revitalizing interest in cultural traditions and artifacts. Continued support and resources are essential for sustaining and expanding these efforts to ensure the preservation of cultural diversity for future generations.

Submitted by

Dr. Doge Ngomdir

Asst. Professor, DPGCK

Counter signed by

Dr. Gindu Borang

Principal, DPGC kamki

D.P.S. College Kamki